

TSC 2010~ Quotes from those who attended last year's conference:

We took a survey of participants in the 2010 Toronto Screenwriting Conference.

Here's what they had to say...

"The level of speakers was phenomenal. The conference ran incredibly smoothly. Thanks for such a well-conceived and run conference. Look forward to 2011."

"It's difficult to pick a favorite speaker. Each one was intelligent, engaging and their experience was invaluable. I also really appreciated all of the practical real-world examples and anecdotes."

"Speakers were inspirational and told us about their own writing routines and challenges. I found this to be most helpful because it gave me insight as to what a real, working writer goes through and the sort of discipline that's required."

"Sheldon Bull explained the format of 30-minute sitcoms extremely well and Dara Marks reminded us how old our stories are, how we can help create "heroic" characters with depth and meaning on a more profound level."

"Sheldon Bull jumped right into it. He took a quick temperature of the room and seeing that most were professionals he didn't dumb anything down."

"Dara offered a perspective that no one else offered and it appealed to me- the idea of an alternative to the hero's journey using the template of the female archetypes. What she said has been huge in my understanding of writing a story about women and being a woman myself."
